WHOEVER YOU ARE, WHEREVER YOU ARE FROM, HARVARD WELCOMES YOU.

Harvard’s global work is a dazzling kaleidoscope, the result of a simple strategy for engagement with the world: to attract talented students and faculty, whatever part of the world they might come from, and to empower them to pursue their teaching and research interests, wherever around the world they might lead.

Dozens of Harvard research centers cross disciplinary boundaries in the search for broad knowledge that is firmly grounded in local contexts, from the University’s Center for African Studies, to the Kennedy School’s Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation, to the Center for the Study of World Religions at the Harvard Divinity School. Many academic departments have an inherently international mission, including Global Health and Population in the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health, and South Asian Studies in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Scientists and engineers from the Harvard Paulson School of Engineering and Applied Sciences, as well as researchers at the Harvard Medical School, the Harvard Business School, and the Graduate School of Design, carry out work that is global by its very nature, and enhanced by numerous collaborations with international partners from Tokyo to Dubai and Santiago to Mumbai. Small wonder that in 2016–17, Harvard students, faculty, and staff traveled to more than 160 countries.

Meanwhile, scholars and students from all over the world come to Harvard by the thousands, vastly enriching the University’s teaching and research. From the Law School to the Graduate School of Education to the Dental School, no part of Harvard lacks global exposure: Over twenty percent of Harvard’s students come from outside the United States, and Harvard consistently hosts more international scholars than any other American university. The Harvard Summer School offers study abroad courses in more than twenty locations, from Santo Domingo to Seoul, and the Radcliffe Institute routinely counts visitors from every continent among its fellows.

Harvard faculty and students drive its global activity. Working through schools, centers, and a growing network of regional offices, and collaborating with peers across the University and around the world, Harvard scholars are advancing the frontiers of knowledge in service to humanity: One Harvard, One World.
